

Subject: Eco-Friendly Transport
Tuesday 11th April 6:02 pm

Hi guys! My name's Sammy. I'm 1) a project at college about greener ways to travel. I have to produce a leaflet that gives people tips about how they can reduce pollution by 2) carefully how they move around town. I want to know if anyone has any good ideas. Thanks for your help!

comments [5]

Hey Sammy, I think people should do more things online from home. By that I mean, why pollute the air by driving your car to the supermarket, when you can order your weekly shopping 3) the Internet? You can also buy clothes, shoes and cars, and 4) holidays as well!

Posted by Billy on 11th April 6:58pm

I know it's obvious, but I try to use public transport whenever I can. I take the bus to college and walk home. When my mum offers to 5) me a lift, I always refuse, as nine times out of ten I can get there quickly and cheaply on public transport. Also, the buses in my town are electric so they are extra environmentally friendly!

Posted by Caroline on 11th April 9:30pm

Why not switch to two wheels? Any motorcycle, moped or scooter will use 6) fuel than a car. You don't get caught in traffic jams either! But, in my opinion the best thing on two wheels is a bicycle! They don't produce any pollution and help you to 7) fit at the same time!

Posted by Daz on 12th April 10:13am

If you have to drive a car, there are environmentally friendly ways to drive. For example, stick to the speed limits and drive smoothly - try not to brake or accelerate 8) much. Turn off any air conditioning and cruise control systems. Also, if you are lucky enough to have a satellite navigation system in your car, use it, as it can save you from getting lost and wasting fuel.

Posted by Jimmer on 14th April 4:00pm

I can't get to my university by bus or train. But I am very aware of green issues, so I put 9) a notice in the university asking if anyone wanted to car share with me. I found three other girls who live nearby and now we take it in turns to drive every day. It's a great arrangement as I have cut my petrol costs in half - and, 10) importantly, I am helping the environment!

Posted by Angel on 15th April 7:32pm